Y.) paper thus relates how the ladies at a Fair recently held in that city, were nearly frightened out of their wits:

Last Wednesday evening a fair was held for some purpose in the large hall of Bennett's block, and matters were progressing quite pleasantly when the ladies and gentlemen present were startled by the appearance in their midst of a wild looking figure, simply and airily attired in a cotton shirt, and holding in one of his hands a lighted candle. This terrific apparition advanced with the most determined gravity of aspect, and halting in the centre of the floor, inquired in a sepulchral voice:—
"What's goin' on here?" The question dispelled the paralysis of awe which the spectre had at first inspired. A modest consternation began to pervade the feminine portion of the company, who could not fail to perceive that the single garment worn by the intruder was of remarkably brief proportions; while a feeling of wrathful indignation took possession of the sterner sex. The fellow was seized and incontinently hustled out of the hall, despite his querulous remonstrances, and on investigating the circumstances, it was discovered that he was a tipsy man on the verge of delirium tremens, who occupied a room on the floor below, and whose slumbers had had been disturbed by the festivities. He was properly taken care
